Frederick Kritchmar Commits Suicide by Cutting His Throat-Merchants Decide to Close Stores May $1st and July 5th.

The dead body of Frederick Kritch-mar, 62, was found in a lot near the Bidwell slaughter house by Paul Gin-holdt while the latter was on his way to work Thursday morning. The throat was out and a few feet from the body was found Mr. Kritchmar's razor. He had been living with his sister, Mrs. Peter Banteau, and Wednasday night about 8 o'clock he left the house. As he did not return it was thought that he had gone to Rock-ville. He has been acting strangely for some time.

Medical Examiner Dr. C. B. Newton and Coroner R. H. Fisk viewed the body and after making investigation pronounced it a case of suicide. Besides the daughter with whom he lived the deceased is survived by one son, Karl Kritchmar, of Monson. Stores to Close May 31st and July 5th.

When Camping Out.

When Camping Out.

The selection of tents when camping out for the summer vacation is discussed in an interesting way by a writer in Suburban Life for June, who says: "The wall of 7x2 foot tent is two feet high. To the bottom of the wall there should be fastened a sod cloth about nine inches wide. The sod cloth is a narrow strip of the same material as the tent, sewn fast to the wall, and its use is to make a tight joint with the ground, by laying on it heavy material like guns, stones, strips of timber—anything, in fact, that will press it so close to the ground that mostice the strip of the ground that mostice is to the ground that mostice in the summer of the strip of the same material like guns, stones, strips of timber—anything, in fact, that will press it so close to the ground that mostice is the summer of the so close to the ground that mosisitors cannot gain an entrance"

Arithmetic Made Easy.

The class in business arithmetic in one of the New York evening schools is made up wholly of men who wield the pickax and push the shovel during the day. These men are ambitious to improve their minds, and the fact that they give up their evenings to study shows that they appreciate the value of a trained mind. But they are pa thetically stupid in some things.

"On the first evening," said the teacher, "I asked the class: 'How much is six times two?" There was no apparent desire to shirk the question. but no amount of head scratching or knitting of brows could bring forth an answer. "T'll put the question in another

"These men can think in dollars and cents quickly enough," said the teach-"but figures are Greek to them."

Criticism of the Dissenter.

It is a useful accomplishment to be able to say no, but it certainly is the essence of amiability to prefer to say yes where it is possible. There is something wrong in the man who does not hate himself whenever he is constrained to say no. And there was a great deal wanting in this born dissenter. He was almost shockingly devoid of weaknesses; he had not enough of them to be truly polar with humanity; whether you called him a demigod or a demi-man, he was at least not altogether one of us, for he was not touched with a feeling of our infirmities. The world's heroes have room for all positive qualities, even those which are disreputable, in the capacious theater of their dispositions. Such can live many lives; while a Thoreau can live but one and that only with perpetual foresight-Stevenson.
